

As I think about the future, these words of our Divine Savior come to mind: “The harvest indeed is great, but the laborers are few” (Matt. 9:37). What Christ meant was that there is a vast number of souls to save, but few laborers to help save them. He was not exaggerating. There was a real lack of laborers at His time, and there is a real lack of laborers today. Let us then pray fervently for vocations. God is hearing our prayers. More young men are answering the call to religious life, and more priests are being trained than in years past. The day is coming when, please God, we will be able to open many more missions and provide the Mass and sacraments for thousands of people and thereby be instrumental in saving countless souls. We must but persevere in our prayers for vocations with confidence.

The New Postulants

How grateful we are to Bishop Kelly for having the prudence and foresight to found Immaculate Heart Seminary so that priests would be formed according to the mind of the Church. We are thankful, as well, that he has passed on his spirit of charity and zeal for souls and established unity in our Congregation. How blessed we are that God in His Providence has given us Bishop Kelly as our Founder and Spiritual Father. Please pray for Bishop Kelly as he celebrates his 80th birthday this November. We are grateful, too, for your prayers and generosity. In return, be assured of our prayers and sacrifices for you and your loved ones.

History Tour

In honor of our twenty-fifth anniversary, we have posted on our website pictures and information regarding the history and works of the Congregation. This includes biographical information about Bishop Alfred Mendez, Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, and our founder, Bishop Clarence Kelly. It also includes information about seminary life and the chapels and missions we service.
